The Play

All scenes in this 3-act comedy are in the converted "office" of an old Georgetown mansion. The time is Spring, 1949.

"TWO BLIND MICE" is a travesty upon the almost-ridiculous growth of bureaus and agencies in our National Government. Two elderly ladies, "blind" to the supposed abolition of "The Office of Seeds and Standards"—under the direction of one's husband until his death—insist upon carrying on his work with admirable, though misdirected, zeal.

A fast-talking nephew comes into the picture and by double talk and innuendo creates a zany situation involving the Army, Navy, Air Corps, State Department and even the White House.

The self-righteous and blustering Senator, loudly proclaiming his intention to expose everything, is caught in his own snare. My, oh my, what a good bluff can do!
