The Sunshine Boys

by Neil Simon
Directed by Harold Judy

In the Red Mask production of "The Sunshine Boys", the leading characters are two old vaudevillians patterned after the famous real-life comedy team of Smith & Dale.

Joe Sulyer and Charlie Marks met in 1898. A few years later they adopted the name of Smith & Dale to fit some unused posters which were for sale cheap. In 1906 they developed a sketch called "Dr. Kronkheit". The act proved to be so popular that Smith & Dale continued to repeat it for the next 62 years. They travelled many times across the country with the sketch and presented it for the final time at a benefit performance in 1968.

Like their counterparts in "The Sunshine Boys", Smith & Dale spent their final years together at an old actors' home. But the parallels end here. While the play stresses the hostility between the two comedians, Smith and Dale were life long friends.

It's the real thing.

Notes from the Director . . .

"Smith and Dale" — "Lewis and Clark" — "Andrews and Sperling".

The last two names are our "Sunshine Boys" and in six short weeks they have transformed Neil Simon's thinly-veiled story drawn from the lives of two real vaudevillians into an evening of pure enjoyment. They are ably supported by a cast mixing young veterans and those on the Red Mask stage for the first time.

Andrews, one who has reached the Biblical number of "three score and ten" provides the relief needed from brash Sperling. It has been such a pleasure to see them grow into the characterizations needed to illustrate the time-span of the original players.

It is our pleasure to have had a small part in bringing together this cast and backstage crew to present one of the outstanding plays of recent seasons.

Letter From The President . . .

Dear Red Mask Members:

It is with pleasure I welcome you to our first adult production of the '76-'77 season. Director Harold Judy, his cast and crew have worked hard to bring you an excellent show — THE SUNSHINE BOYS.

During July our theatre hosted four fine college productions. In September Jean Lewis again did her fantastic job directing the Childrens Theatre. Red Mask recently joined the Illinois Community Theatre Association. The exterior of the building has undergone brick and metal repairs. A new roof has been installed. We have just completed a successful work day on the interior of the theatre.

Your generous support during our recent membership drive was great! Board and committee members are working to give you a top notch season.

We are fortunate to have many fine community and school productions throughout the year. I would like to encourage you to share your enthusiasm for Red Mask with your friends and neighbors and give theatre arts in this part of Illinois your support.

Sunshine Boys is now yours to enjoy! Have a good season.

Sincerely,
James D. Beebe
President, Red Mask
