The Play

The time of the play is the present, the locale a large city in the Far West, actual scenes in the library of the old Dodd mansion and a mental sanitarium known as Chumley's Rest.

Act I

Scene 1—The Dodd library, late afternoon
Scene 2—Chumley's Rest, an hour later

Act II

Scene 1—The Dodd library, an hour later
Scene 2—Chumley's Rest, four hours later

Act III

Scene 1—Chumley's Rest, a few minutes later

Just remember that "Harvey" is a six-foot rabbit, the figment of Elwood Dowd's imagination yet so real in Elwood's mind that others seem to share the hallucination, practically making a believer of Psychiatrist Chumley. As a consequence, the tables are turned when Elwood's sister endeavors to have him committed to an institution.
