

RED MASK PLAYERS

(DANVILLE'S LITTLE THEATRE GROUP)

— Presents —

“There’s Always Juliet”

By JOHN VAN DRUTEN

Produced With Special Permission of Samuel French.

Wednesday, April 12, 1944

Y. W. C. A. AUDITORIUM

8:15 P. M.

Directed by KATHRYN RANDOLPH

Assisted by MARGARET EWING

SYNOPSIS

This dainty and humorsome comedy, with Edna Best and Herbert Marshall in its leading roles, was one of the greatest successes of past Broadway seasons. The play opens with Leonora Perrycoste, a very attractive young English lady, at the telephone trying to learn the identity of a handsome American she has just met at a tea party. In the midst of naive inquiries, Dwight Houston, the young American in question, appears in her flat, having been impelled to visit her by an urge similar to her own. They are instantly off in a mad-cap adventure, loving each other but wondering. After two days of lunching together, dining together and motoring in the country, they feel that they understand each other perfectly. Suddenly he is recalled to America. He proposes. She hesitates, and reluctantly they part. As soon as he has gone Leonora realizes that her discretion is the poorest part of her valor. Just as she has begun to feel that for her the world has ended, Dwight, at a last moment's reprieve, returns for three more days' grace. Leonora, not going to miss another chance, readily accepts him, and as the curtain falls Dwight salutes his mother-in-law over the long distance telephone.

THE CAST

Leonora Perrycoste.....Alice Wolff
Florence.....Fern Telling
Dwight Houston.....Finley Hogbin
Peter Walmsley.....Leonard Waller

THE ACTION

SCENE: Leonora's sitting-room in a flat in the West End of London.

ACT I.

Monday evening. (The curtain is lowered during the act to indicate the passage of a few hours.)

ACT II.

Tuesday evening.

ACT III.

Wednesday afternoon. (The curtain is lowered during the act to indicate the passage of several hours.)

PROPERTIES AND COSTUMES

Katherine Robison
Ruth Tuggle

CASTING

Mary Miller
Sarah Selby
Ruth Tuggle

MAKE-UP

Peg Adams
Irene Downey

USHERS

Bonnie FitzGerald
Geneva Smith

TICKETS

Lethamae Farmer
Violet Farmer

COURTESIES

Y. W. C. A.
Hotel Wolford
Hill Lumber Company